Pretrial policies drive jail growth

Number of people in local jails on a given day, by conviction status

The growth in the total jail population over the last 25 years is the direct result of increases in pretrial detention, not increases in the number of convicted people held in jails.